CREATIVITY. IMAGINATION. FUN.

A fourth grade Henry student's personal logo. 2018

5th Graders are creating a scene using one-point perspective. They were given the choice to demonstrate this technique in any way chosen. It is fun to see the creativity of students and the ideas they come up with to solve this problem. We have also been working on a backdrop for their musical. They collaborated together to pick their favorite student artwork and then worked on the actual artwork together.

4th Graders are still in the middle of their clay weaving but have taken a break while being fired in the kiln to create another project. They were introduced to graphic design (specifically making logos), and are making a personal logo based on what they like and their interests.

3rd Graders are making robots in space. We learned about the planets (throwing a little science in there). We also learned how to create shade and value on our planets, just like real planets. We are going to combine our outer space scene and robots together.

Projects & News

2nd Graders finally were able to finish their canopic jars. We have been coloring and painting them and are on their way home. Our next project is going to be about Vincent van Gogh. We will be making a still life using contrasting colors, cylinder shapes, and a personal item.

1st Graders are just finishing up a still life using actual objects. They practiced drawing the scene in front of them. They then drew a final “best” drawing and colored them in with watercolor pencils. They also learned about how objects create shadows and will include them in their final drawing.

Kindergarteners were read the book, “Yertle the Turtle” and created a turtle with implied texture. They used texture plates to make crayon rubbings on their turtles and colored the entire paper. They really enjoy doing this, and it would be an easy thing to create at home.
